The Integrated Program in Humane Studies (IPHS), the oldest of Kenyon’s interdisciplinary programs, involves students in an intensive study of classic works deriving from a wide range of diverse historical contexts, cultural settings, and fields of knowledge. Our mission is to encourage and guide intellectual exploration and experimentation. Balancing tradition and innovation, IPHS is dedicated to helping students clearly and articulately express their interpretations, analyses, and evaluations of classic works ranging from Homer and Dante to Woolf and Proust. By discovering or creating links between areas of knowledge and modes of knowing that are most often segregated by disciplines and departments, IPHS encourages students to think holistically and critically. It also provides students with the opportunity to experiment with an array of expressive media, including essays, films, multimedia presentations, graphic arts, and plays. These projects enable students to develop their craft in written communication, oral communication, critical thinking, and new media skills, including design and composition.

The Curriculum

Unlike any other program of its kind, IPHS blends lectures, small seminars (typically twelve students), and one-on-one student-faculty tutorials. This unique approach to learning allows students to work closely with their professors. IPHS promotes a sense of community in which intellectual differences are respected and intellectual ties and relations are forged.

By completing the first-year course, students can fulfill 2 units toward a concentration (and 1.5 units of the diversification requirement for humanities or the social sciences). Beyond the first-year course, IPHS students can earn a concentration by completing at least 1 unit of intermediate-level study, including at least one upper-level seminar, and at least .5 unit during the senior year.

Enrollment is limited. Look for the ◆ symbol, which designates the courses appropriate for first-year students new to the IPHS curriculum.

First-Semester Courses

Modernism and Its Critics
IPHS 215 (.5 unit, for students in their second or third year of IPHS or history, or by permission)

Katherine Elkins

Continuing the inquiries begun in 113Y-114Y, the IPHS 215 seminar addresses the rise of modernism, which represented a massive fissure in Western consciousness. A fault line visible since Romanticism suddenly fractured. One consequence was that something utterly unique, highly unsettling, and profoundly revolutionary occurred: the role of art and the artist leapt into extraordinary prominence. Why in modernism do the issues of “self,” “society,” and “authority” figure so prominently in the aesthetic domain? What does the signal role of art suggest about the character of modernism itself? How successful has art been as the focal point of ques-

Year Course

Odyssey of the West
◆ IPHS 113Y-114Y (2 units for students in their first year of IPHS)
Elkins, Evans, Maguire, Shutt, Spiekerman

In the first semester, we explore the themes of love and justice, purity and power, fidelity to the family, and loyalty to the state. Through reading selections from the Hebrew Bible, Homer, Plato, Aristotle, Thucydides, Virgil, and Dante, we investigate these themes as they find expression in the Judeo-Christian and Greco-Roman traditions and in their European legacies. In the second semester, we focus on the themes of law and disorder, harmony and entropy, and modernity and its critics. Beginning with Machiavelli, Shakespeare, and Hobbes, we investigate the desire to construct a unified vision through reason, and the disruption or refinement of that vision, in the works of such authors as Nietzsche, Darwin, and Marx. Throughout the year, we explore the connections between the visual arts, literature, and philosophy. In tutorial sessions, students concentrate on developing the craft of writing. IPHS 113Y-114Y will fulfill several of the College’s diversification requirements: up to .5 unit of history and/or political science, and/or up to 1 unit of English. Enrollment limited.
A major long-term project may continue through the second semester.

Individual Study
IPHS 493 (.25 or .5 unit)
Staff
This course is for students who wish to do advanced work beyond regular courses or to study topics not included in course offerings. Prerequisites: permission of instructor and director of IPHS.

Second-Semester Courses

Postmodernism and Its Critics
IPHS 318 (.5 unit)
Elkins
This course takes as its starting point the innovations ushered in by modernism. Some of the central questions we will ask are: Is postmodernism just an extension of modernism, or an entirely different movement? Is it historical (i.e., delimited by a certain period in history) or rather a group of attributes that can be found in much earlier works (for example, in Cervantes). We will briefly examine theoretical trends like semiotics, structuralism, deconstruction, feminism, postcolonialism, and poststructuralism before looking at postmodernist works of art across disciplines. Is postmodernism unified as a trend, exhibiting resonances in architecture, painting, film, music, dance, and literature, or is it expressed uniquely according to each discipline? Enrollment priority will be given to those students who have taken IPHS 113Y-114Y followed by IPHS 215.

Dante’s Divine Comedy
IPHS 323 (.5 unit)
Shutt
In this course, we will study the whole of Dante’s Divine Comedy in John Sinclair’s Oxford translation. Prerequisite: sophomore standing. Enrollment limited.
