The Discrimination Advisors are a group of students, faculty, and staff who work to promote an environment at Kenyon that is welcoming of diversity and free of offensive discrimination. This includes speech or behavior that is intended to stigmatize, threaten, insult, or otherwise hurt another person(s) based on the recipient's race, gender, ethnicity, sexuality, religion, national origin, or other characteristic intrinsic to the person's identity.

Advisors serve as informal resources for students who want to talk about discrimination issues. They are available to listen to complaints, discuss allegations, suggest ways of addressing situations, facilitate discussions (when appropriate), provide information about College policies and procedures, or provide referral to others who can help. In addition, advisors plan awareness events around campus on issues of discrimination and diversity.
