Ted Lawrence received a BA in history from Kenyon College in 2008. After graduation, he moved to Washington, DC, where he worked as an assistant editor at The National Interest, a foreign-policy magazine. He also served as a research assistant to Reuters Supreme Court correspondent Joan Biskupic, while she wrote her biographies of Supreme Court Justices Antonin Scalia and Sonia Sotomayor. Ted returned to his native Ann Arbor in 2010 to attend the University of Michigan Law School, and graduated in 2013. He is currently clerking for a judge of the Michigan Court of Appeals.
